OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, July 7, 1895.

This is the time when the amateur presiential boomer hies himself to Washington nd, in the absence of bigger game, succeeds s getting himself intervewed and booming us favorite, as far as a dog day newspaper interview can boom anybody. One of the surest ways to spot one of these amateur omers is by his way of speaking of things being settled which everybody who is at all informed on politics knows to be extremely doubtful. One of these gentlemen, a bright young lawyer from Iowa, is now in Washington. A foreigner who didn't know my better and listened to him for ten inutes would be struck with wonder at the knowledge he displays of what will be done nearly a year hence by the Republican party. He disposes of the three men regarded by politicians as standing the best show for the nomination by declaring Reed to live too far east, McKiul y to be a protectionist, and Harrison to have had his turn. Gov. Morton he does not even mention, although most close observers consider him very much in the contett. This young prophet then announces with an air that admits of no doubt that Senator Allison will be nominated by the Republicans. Schater Allison has many friends and admirers in Washington both in and out of his own party, but I haven't found one of them who considers his chance for the nomination anything more than a contingent one, depending upon a deadlock in the convention between the friends of the other candidates. Should such a deadlock occur. Schator Allison's chances of being chosen as a dark horse would doubtless be very good, but in the absence of such a deadlock the politicians do not believe he will do more than receive the complimentary vote of his own delegation and perhaps a score more scattered among the various states.

The amalgamation of the Republican, Democratic and Populist silver organizations in Colorado was well received at the silver headquarters in Washington, where they say it had been expected for some time, and that it is a notice surved upon the Democratic and Republican parties of what may be expected in all the silver states if the old parties ignore silver in their national platforms next year.

For some reason not made public the administration seems to have changed its mind about the case of Waller, the ex consul who was sentenced by a French court-martial to twenty years imprisonment for alleged treasonable action in Madagascar, and who is now confined in a prison to France. Some time ago it was stated unofficially that Ambassador Eustis had investigated this case and that there was no reason why this government should interfere in Waller's behalf. Now it is stated that acting Secretary of State Adee has instructed Ambassador Eustis to demand of the French government access to the official record of the trial of Waller, and to say that this government will consider a refusal conivalent to an ac knowledgement that the man is wrongfully imprisoned. Whether this means that the administration intends to do something for Waller or that it merely wishes Mr. Eustis to get access to the record for the purpose of showing that Waller has no right to ask interference in his behalf is at this time uncertain. But it is difficult to understand how Ambassador Eustis could have considered the case investigated in the first place without having seen the record of Waller's trial and conviction. It is probable that the clamor raised by some of the newspapers for political effect has had something to do with renowing the administration's interest in Waller's case.

Every now and then something turns up that is calculated to convince the most skeptical that the world is certainly growing more refined in its tastes, if not better. One of those somethings turned up in Washington several days ago. A thrifty Virginia farmer thought he could sell it to the government, for exhibition in one of the public museums, but he was mistaken. This something was a human skeleton, encased in an iron frame, the skull being covered by a heavy iron helmet. The would-be seller of this gruesome relia of the first half of the century, which was recently accidentally dug up in Prince George county, Va., brought certified copies of the county records showing that the skeleton in the iron cage was that of a slave, who was placed alive in the cage about 150 years ago, for having murdered his master, and who was publicly allowed to starve to death as a warning to his fellow slaves. The man attempted to exhibit this thing in Washington but so much indignation was expressed at the attempt to get money from such a source that he quickly took himself and what he claimed to be his property away from the city.

According to the director of the physical observatory of St. Petersburg, M. Wild, the coldest inhabited spot on earth is the village of Verkholansk on the Yana river in northeastern Siberia, about 100 miles north of the polar circle in latitude 67 degrees 34 minutes.

The Perfect Place to Dwell In-

We had always been hunting for it, We had always felt sure that somewhere, some day, we should find the perfect place which was to combine the charm of the middle ages with the comfort of the nineteenth century-the Albert Durer town which could be reached in a reilway train, with mediaval streets through which the dinner bell would make a pleasant sound, where there would be plenty of picturesque dirt in other people's houses, plenty of fresh water and clean rooms in our own hotel. Perhaps this is a bourgeois idea. But then that is our affair.

Eight years of wandering had brought us no closer to our undiscovered country, when, last summer, as we were traveling in the mountains of-but not why should we will the name? Why break the serenity of its hilly streets with the rush of personally conducted parties or of easel lades artists? Why turn it into another Barbizon or Laguerre's, another Chester or Nurem Besides, we have exploited so many places in our day; we have, in our recklessness, presented the painter, the illustrator, the magazine writer with more motives than they can exhaust i a generation; we have, by our entprise, developed the cycling trade to a incalculable extent, and by our periods made the fortune of helf the hotel l ers in Provence. And the result for Not a cyclemanufacturer would giva machine if we asked for it, not a lan lord would throw us a crust were starving, not an art student would in a space moment to thank us. No: 1 name of the most picturesque place the world we shall keep to ourselve is foolish deliberately to court the of Columbus or Stanley .- Mr. and Pennell in Century.

Too Much Hay.

Farm horses almost invariably eat too much hay. Many farmers have no regular ration for their horses, but throw down a forkful of hay almost every time they enter the barn. As a result many of these horses are eating from morning till night, to the manifest disadvantage of the haymow and the manifest disadvantage also of the horses, whose bodie become distended, skins dry and coats rough, while the digestive organs are thrown out of gear, so that the animal's whole system becomes impaired.—American Agriculturist.
